A big tower for all ages

Mordred is a genuine knight's castle, where children can play together, regardless of their developmental stage and motor skills. Via the steps, most ages can reach the slides. The wide suspension bridge with boards ensures that even small and diffident feet can dash across to the lookout barrel, where the movable telescope can be used to look out across the entire playground.

Fun play panels support children's natural development

The prison, the movable ship's wheel and sword and all the other play panels stimulate children's senses, fine motor skills and language development. For example, the prison's rubber slats help develop the children's sense of space, while the numerous small movable parts offer interesting challenges for young fiddly fingers.
